IMDM490 Immersive Media Design: Capstone I

In this team-taught course, you will begin the process of creating a large scale immersive media design project that represents the culmination of your creative and practical research within the IMD major. During the first semester of the capstone, you will dedicate yourself toward the early-stage and pre-production processes of your capstone project. Your time will be spent on ideation, feasibility studies, and critical feedback sessions on your concepts prior to beginning the actual production on your chosen project. Capstone projects may be individual, or team-based. However, the expectation is that your project will reflect two semesters of effort, and incorporate many skills that you have learned during your time in the major. Significant time in class will be dedicated to studio production and peer feedback sessions. Frequent in-class critiques will take place as projects evolve and progress. At the terminus of this semester, you will be expected to have defined the core elements of your capstone project: its content and conceptual focus, whatever technical or logistical issues need to be addressed, and how they will be solved. You will have also made tangible progress toward the completion of your capstone project.

Prerequisites: minimum of C- in IMDM390